THE SONOR STORY

Since 1875 when the Sonor factory was founded, quality has never been sacrificed for quantity. The same design skills, personal dedication and German craftsmanship that started the factory have been maintained to this day. Over the years the bond between Sonor and the drummer himself has grown to such a degree that the family of users now extends around the world.

Black and white wooden beamed houses dot the countryside surrounding the tiny picturesque village of Aue. This peaceful West German setting is the home of Sonor. It is a small factory employing local people who take a personal pride in producing only the very best products. This rare personalized craftsmanship, for which the Germans are traditionally renowned, excels in the standard of finish obtained both in the metal and wood used in the construction of Sonor drums.

When you read the latest catalogue, you will find it reflects the dedication to detail that is inherent in all products bearing the Sonor trademark. It illustrates how the solid 9, 10 or 12 ply vibrating sound shells are formed in special oil heated presses. Also shown is how the cymbal stand tilters, bongo stands, tom holders and boom arms all have a steel skeleton, over which a strong alloy is cast, before being dipped in Sonorchrome. After further processing all products undergo a final quality check, prior to despatch.

Sonor are very proud of the fact that Australia, together with over 100 other countries, now imports more than half of the Sonor production, enabling you to see, hear and play a Sonor product of your own. Rest assured that behind the scenes we have an energetic workforce of technicians, designers and drummers just like yourself, that make and keep Sonor the best percussion equipment in the world.
